A native of Rose Hill, Kansas, Kendall earned his BSED at Pittsburg State from 1987–91. He was a member of the Gorillas football squad all five years and was a captain his final two years. He was drafted by the NFL's Pittsburgh Steelers in 1992 and spent 15 years in the NFL (Steelers 1992–95, Saints 1996–99, Chiefs 2002–06). After retiring from the NFL in 2006, he became a member of the Chiefs Radio network for 12 years, as well as taking a position with his alma mater, Pitt State Gorillas and is still with PSU as the Special Assistant to the President. Additionally, Kendall has authored two books and speaks all around the country on Emotional Communication and the Power of Gratitude, along with other topics. Kendall has played in the Super Bowl and also was the radio commentator for the Chiefs Super Bowl win in 2019. After taking a year off from radio, Kendall is now hosting a 3-hour pregame show for the Chiefs. Kendall is the proud dad of two boys, Blaise (26) and Drake (23).
